WILDERNESS IS OUR COMMON GROUND

We've both lived in Idaho for over 25 years. Our businesses in Ketchum rely heavily on local recreation enthusiasts as well as tourists who are drawn to the valley by the vast wilderness that surrounds us and has endured unchanged for thousands of years. Whether it's hiking to the top of Castle Peak, watching wildlife in its natural habitat or simply appreciating the serenity and solitude that can still be found in Idaho's backcountry, our pristine, roadless forests provide a one-of-a-kind experience to Idahoans of all ages and from all walks of life and help drive Idaho's billion dollar recreation economy. As businessmen, outdoor enthusiasts, and most importantly as Idahoans, we need to work together to protect open spaces like the Boulder-White Cloud Mountains. Because wilderness is about more than just protecting Idaho's wild places—it's about creating possibilities for everyone.
